

13th July 2020

Hi Class 13,

I am writing you to you to introduce myself as your class teacher. I know that is a bit strange, as you already know me really well as the Deputy, but next year I will also be your class teacher. You probably know that I often teach in year 6, but probably don't know that I use to be a full-time year 6 teacher and I loved it. As well as being a teacher I am a mum, which keeps me busy and enjoy lots of different things. One of my favourite things is going on holiday and I have been lucky enough to visit some amazing places. I also enjoy running and cooking.

Next year is going to be really exciting and fun, but I think you need to know that it is also going to be hard work as well. In a year's time, you will be going off to secondary school, and it's my job to make sure that you are ready. I want to make sure that you leave West Heath instilled with our core values and ready to face any challenges that come your way.

During our first term in school, we will be learning all about conflict. We will start off by looking at the impact of World War Two and consider if Britain was justified in going to war in 1939. We will learn how the war started and look at the impact it had on different people across the world. In the second half of the term we will look at more recent conflicts and the impact they are having right now.

When you return to school, I will be your class teacher, but there will be lots of other people working alongside us. Coach Adam will be taking you for PE; Miss Flora will be in the next classroom as the other year 6 teacher; Miss Outhwaite will teach some subjects in the afternoons; Mrs Woodcock will work as a teaching assistant with us every morning and Mrs Bosworth will also work across year 6.

We can't wait to welcome you back to school in September and start our exciting adventure. Over the holidays I would love you to read, read, read. I have put a few of my favourite books for year 6 at the bottom here as my personal recommendations.

Enjoy your summer and we will see you in September!

From Mrs Foster
